

Mark your calendars for the Livestock Care Conference March 26, 2010

The fast-evolving progress, issues and opportunities related to livestock care are among the most important ones redefining the future of the livestock industry in Canada and beyond.

Farmers, ranchers, industry and others looking for an inside track to understanding and capitalizing on the latest developments in farm animal care are invited to register with Alberta Farm Animal Care (AFAC) for the Livestock Care Conference, slated for Friday, March 26, 2010 in Red Deer.

With a theme of “Managing Challenges, Producing Opportunities” the conference features leading speakers with insights on where things are headed, and what they mean for producers and their industry, in a range of key areas important to livestock care. Examples include market access, regulatory direction, and developing a new vision for linking consumers with processes and people in livestock production. Presentations will also feature real world case studies and key examples of research and innovation. Early bird registration is available before March 15. Register online at <http://www.afac.ab.ca/registration/index.htm> or by phone at 403-932-8050.

Remember, if you see livestock that are having a tough time getting through the winter in good shape, please call AFAC’s confidential toll free ALERT Line at 1-800- 506-2273. We care!!
